A message from our leadership

Donald J. Wiley
President & CEO
St. Joseph's Medical Center

Julie Kay Eckardt-Cantrall
VP & Chief Philanthropy Officer
St. Joseph's Foundation

At St. Joseph's Medical Center we are fortunate to be part of a thriving community where we work together to ensure high quality, compassionate care for people across the San Joaquin county and beyond. Now, during these unique times, when a pandemic threatened to change everything, the caregivers of St. Joseph's response was inspiring. St. Joseph's met COVID-19 head on with an intensity to ensure each patient had the best care and clinical outcome.

Central to our efforts was the generosity of our donors and supporters who have embraced St. Joseph's with outpouring of support for the unsung heroes working in healthcare. From parking lot caravans and sidewalk chalk art to donated meals, masks and more, our community has embraced us and for that we are thankful.

While our focus temporarily shifted to the pandemic, great work continued across our organization:

- We expanded our Graduate Medical Education program to help train and retain physicians in our community. By 2025, we aim to have 12 programs with 215 residents.
- We provided $58 million in community benefit, including charity care, financial assistance programs, and community health services.
- We awarded $372,000 in Community Grants to seven local community organizations seeking to provide health and human services to residents most in need in our county.
- Our Heart & Vascular Institute, the 10th largest cardiac surgery program in the state, was again recognized as one of the top quality programs with a three star rating by the Society of Thoracic Surgeons.
- We expanded our pediatrics services to include 24/7 on-site pediatric hospitalist and neonatologist coverage.

We are also grateful for the continued financial support of our donors. So much has been achieved, thanks to you and others who share your passion for the quality care St. Joseph's provides to countless patients treated each year.

We are in this together

Philanthropy paves the way for increased COVID-19 testing

This spring, philanthropy played a key role in increasing our community's COVID-19 testing capacity. St. Joseph's is the only Dignity Health hospital with in-house testing capability, utilizing our Healthcare Clinical Laboratory. Your ongoing support enabled us to purchase much-needed additional laboratory equipment. With our enhanced testing capabilities, we are to support our hospital, other Dignity Health hospitals, and many of our community hospitals.

“As a leading regional teaching hospital, St. Joseph's is uniquely positioned. Our testing and research capabilities are two examples of innovations in healthcare, allowing us to better serve the needs of our community.”

-Scott Neeley, M.D. Vice President & Chief Medical Officer

GME residents launch COVID-19 research studies

St. Joseph's Graduate Medical Education (GME) research department is actively participating in several studies to aid the worldwide learning curve for the treatment of COVID-19.

Two studies focused on treatment options, one including the use of convalescent plasma from recovered COVID-19 patients into those who are seriously ill from the virus. Another study focused on COVID-19 antibody testing to collect information about individuals' potential exposure to the disease.

Teri Kozik, PhD, Director of GME Research, advising Angela Edet, MD, a first year resident in St. Joseph's Family Medicine residency program.

A new normal

The mission of St. Joseph's is to improve the health of our greater community by providing quality health care services, exceeding the expectations of those we serve.

The safety of our visitors, patients, employees, and physicians remains our highest priority. In the midst of the pandemic, we want to assure the community that St. Joseph's is closely monitoring all developments with COVID-19 and we are prepared to identify, isolate, and treat any potential patient who seeks care at our facility.

We are in constant contact with local and state health officials, as well as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and our staff is following the latest guidelines from these public health agencies. St. Joseph's has the supplies and equipment needed to effectively manage the care of any suspected or confirmed COVID-19 patients and we are continuously assessing the volume of supplies at our hospital.

To help keep the community engaged and informed, St. Joseph's launched a webinar series addressing the next steps in healthcare in San Joaquin County. Our panelists provided an update on COVID-19 cases in our county, discussed safety measures in place at St. Joseph's, and emphasized the importance of not delaying much needed care.

"It's our promise to deliver exceptional care with dignity and humankindness."

—Donald J. Wiley
President & CEO

"Music expresses that which cannot be put into words and which cannot remain silent."

-Victor Hugo, poet (1802-1885)

Healing Through Music

Music therapy at St. Joseph's is just one of the many programs funded through donations to St. Joseph's Foundation of San Joaquin.

Through a newly developed partnership with University of the Pacific's Conservatory of Music, St. Joseph's recently launched a clinical music therapy program, led by Board Certified Music Therapist, Casie Little.

Whether writing a song with a teen patient, soothing babies and families in the NICU, or playing soothing music to terminally ill patients, Casie has proven herself an integral part of St. Joseph's care team.

In her research-based work, Casie uses clinical music therapy to:

- Improve sleep patterns and promote weight gain in premature infants
- Reduce pain levels and anxiety
- Lessen the effects of dementia
- Reduce asthma episodes in youth and adults
- And so much more

As the COVID-19 pandemic began to unfold, Casie quickly adapted her work to a virtual platform offering patients and staff music therapy sessions – designed to heal while practicing safe social distancing.

Casie also has taken to YouTube, where each week she shares different interventions and musical experiences to support wellness. While Casie's YouTube videos feature mostly therapeutic music, St. Joseph's clinical music therapy program partners with members of our care team to incorporate music into a patient's recovery and treatment.

She continues to offer virtual music therapy sessions for both staff and patients daily through Zoom. She also offers relaxation sessions for staff in the Pavilion Meditation Room two days a week.

With your continued support, we look forward to expanding this impactful program.

Stockton Golf & Country Club “Thursday Ladies” honored for their community philanthropy

More than 11 years ago, after the loss of a dear personal friend and fellow LPGA golf pro, Kelley Spooner, Head Golf Professional at Stockton Golf and Country Club (SGCC), called upon a small – but mighty – group of lady golfers to start a local golf tournament in support of those fighting cancer.

The “SGCC Thursday Ladies” created a guest day tournament, drawing 100+ women from Northern California. Since the tournament’s inception in 2008, the SGCC Thursday Ladies have raised nearly $175,000 for the fight against cancer.

Initially supporting Susan G. Komen, after their 2015 tournament, Lynn Cook, a member fighting cancer herself, was vocal about the importance of supporting local cancer services. Based on personal experiences, the Thursday Ladies turned their support locally to St. Joseph’s Cancer Institute.

In just four years, the SGCC Thursday Ladies have raised over $114,000 for St. Joseph’s Cancer Institute.

Their generosity enables St. Joseph’s Cancer Institute to provide advanced cancer treatment, delivered with compassion, close to home. Their donations specifically fund St. Joseph’s Cancer Institute’s Patient Navigator, COPE support services, and Lynn W. Cook Cancer Exercise Programs. These programs and services are solely possible through the generosity of community donors.

In addition to supporting St. Joseph’s, they have an annual “charity day” where they choose to support local nonprofit organizations.

In recognition for all of their great work, the SGCC Thursday Ladies were recognized in November as Outstanding Volunteer Fundraisers at the Association of Fundraising Professionals (AFP) California Chapter’s National Philanthropy Day Awards Celebration. Each year, our local AFP chapter recognizes and pays tribute to outstanding achievements by individuals, corporations, foundations, and organizations whose philanthropy creates significant impact on the quality of life in the San Joaquin Valley region.

Hundreds of local patients and family members have been touched by the generosity of the SGCC Thursday Ladies. We at St. Joseph’s continue to be inspired by their drive and determination to fight cancer in our community.

In just four years, the Stockton Golf and Country Club Thursday Ladies have raised over $114,000 for St. Joseph’s Cancer Institute.
